BANGLI - Gunung Batur is an active volcano located in the Kintamani District of Bali, Indonesia. The volcano is situated on the island's eastern edge, with a height of 1,717 meters above sea level. It is one of the island's most popular attractions due to its stunning scenery, trekking opportunities, and hot springs.

The trek to the summit of Gunung Batur is a popular activity, especially for tourists seeking a challenging hike and panoramic views of the surrounding area. It typically takes around two hours to reach the summit, and the trek can be organized through local tour operators or guides. Many visitors choose to hike to the summit to watch the sunrise, which is a breathtaking sight.

The area around Gunung Batur is also known for its natural hot springs, which are believed to have healing properties due to their high mineral content. The hot springs are a popular place to relax and unwind after a long hike or to enjoy a soak in the natural waters. There are also several restaurants and cafes in the area that offer stunning views of the volcano and the surrounding landscape.

Overall, Gunung Batur is a must-visit destination for anyone traveling to Bali who enjoys nature, adventure, and stunning landscapes. (Destinasi)
